This trophy of their prowess is more to be desired among crack shots than large jewels, and for the year that it belonged to the local soldiery it stood in a place of honor in the War, State and Navy Department building, and was the admired of all admirers, with its noble expanse of embossed bronze and silver. This year the boys are going to bring that trophy back or they will know some good reason why. are enjoying, for the reason that a rifleman must be in the very pink of condition in order to do himself justice. It will be no case of "Rifleman, shoot me a fancy shot." There will be few chances for individual records, for in matches like those on hand it all depends on team work. What doth it profit the team if one man scores all bulls'-eves when the man that follows him bulls'-eyes when the man that follows him makes just as many misses?

While they are gone the whole detachment will be commanded by Maj. George H. Harries, the inspector general of rifle practice. About forty men in all are expected to go, for in addition to the brigade team there will be a team from each regiment, from the engineer corps and the sixth battalion who will compete in the regimental matches, and there will be a large amount of surprise about headquarters if they do not bring back with them a great many rewards of either team or individual excellence.

The sixteen men, principals and alternates, who compose the brigade team are Corporal Morris Appleby, company B, third battalion; Capt. James E. Bell, inspector rifle practice, second regiment; Private Robert P. Carlton, company A, engineer corps; Capt. William L. Cash, inspector rifle practice, first regiment; Col. regatta at Detroit, and the crowd to witness the races was even larger than Wednesday. All of the heats rowed yesterday were finals, the preliminaries having been finished.

Just before the opening heat the executive committee went into session at the Detroit Boat Club to consider the charges against Oarsmen Curran and Gray. The charges were preferred by one McConville, a Buffalo saloon keeper. Curran and Gray were called before the committee to state their side of the case. It is alleged that McConville wagered $100 on the pair in the race at Hamilton. During the race one of the seats broke and McConville dropped his money. This made the saloon man red hot, and he charged that they had received $50 from the committee in Buffalo for rowing in the Buffalo regatta. The committee decided to let the pair race under protest, and McConville's charges will be investigated further. Summaries:

Couldn't Hit Daub's Delivery.
Daub, the pitcher Brooklyn got from the Southern League, pitched his second game for that club yesterday, and the home team was unable to place their hits safely. Meakin pitched a good game for Washington, and had the Senators been able to do any batting as hits were needed they could have won easily. Farrell caught. Sam Wise returned to third, O'Rourke to the field, and McGuire covered first. It is as good an arrangement as can be made probably. Only one man on each side reached first on errors.

The home team commendably sacrificed with a man on first and only inability to make the needed hit prevented scoring.
The visitors didn't make many hits, but they made them with men on bases.
The only feature of the fielding was nipping Griffin at the plate when he tried to stretch his three-bagger into a home run. Sullivan made an admirable throw to Farrell. Score:

VIGILANT BEATS THE JUBILEE. Test of Speed Under Light Winds Between the Crack Yachts.

The Vigilant and Jubilee had a test of speed under light winds yesterday in their sail and the Vigilant beat the Paine boat out about one minute. The yachtsmen were up bright and early and the entire fleet started with the racers, but were badly left in the run.
At 10 o'clock came the preparatory signal. Both the America's cup defenders were standing up toward the windward end of the line on the port tack, the Vigi of the line that she bore away a little to cross.

At 10:25 the wind hauled a bit to the southward and came lighter. Bearing away around the rock the yachts had a clear course for Point Judith. The Jubilee was full three minutes to the good in rounding the rock and got the full advantage of the breeze as it freshened from the southward with a shift of several points. Under its influence she increased her speed. About 11 o'clock the wind freed a bit to the westward and the Jubilee dropped her staysail and set a balloon in its place. The move was imitated by the Vigilant, and both boats kept on for ten minutes under the same sail. The Jubilee took a bit hisger heel to the force of the wind, but was going fast and easily. The Vigilant stood up straighter, it seemed as if she were going slower.

They are to box at 118 pounds, and Dixon will have only a slight advantage in the matter of weight. For upward of a year the English champion has been eager to try on the gloves with O'Kourke's man, but something always turned up to prevent a something always turned up to prevent a meeting between them. Barring a few box-ers, and a very few at that, Dixon is the best drawing card in this country today. The international fiavor of his coming en-
